Jennifer Creedon is a trial attorney who represents large and small companies in product liability, business litigation, and asbestos litigation. Jen also focuses on regulatory issues regarding consumer products and represents companies that manufacture, distribute, and sell a wide range of products.

Whether a company's litigation is confined to one lawsuit or requires a multi-lawsuit solution, Jen can craft a defense strategy that fits the company's needs. Jen has defended product liability and toxic tort cases involving a wide range of chemicals, resins, paints, construction products, joint compounds and wallboards, roofing materials, floor tiles, refractory products, boilers, brakes and other automobile components, refineries, shipyards, and industrial and chemical premises. Jen has an in-depth understanding of regulations, industry standards, state-of-the-art defenses, industrial hygiene defenses, medical defenses, and experts in both product- and premise-based toxic tort litigation. She has defended design defect cases relating to bicycles, construction equipment, industrial equipment, and medical equipment.

Jen has prepared and argued appeals before the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, the Massachusetts Appeals Court, and the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court.

Jen has defended toxic tort and product liability actions in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. She has served as local, regional, and national counsel for companies involved in toxic tort and asbestos litigation.

Jen has years of experience defending talc defendants as national, regional, and local counsel and is poised to defend any company involved in the newly emerging and new frontier of talc litigation. Jen is cognizant of the high-stakes nature of this possible “next asbestos” and is highly vigilant in representing her clients to protect their bottom lines.

Jen has been part of a national counsel team for a Fortune 500 company and designed national trial strategy, involving preparation of corporate witnesses, expert witnesses, and drafted nationwide discovery. In that capacity, she has handled cases in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Texas, and Washington. Additionally, she has handled Federal Multidistrict Litigation including cases consolidated in MDL 875 (In Re: Asbestos Product Liability Litigation (No. VI)) and the Maritime Docket (MARDOC).

Jen also defends construction defect cases regarding residential and commercial properties brought against contractors, manufacturers, suppliers, and architects. She is experienced in defending water intrusion, structural problems, and mold cases.

Jen also represents manufacturers and retailers in litigation and compliance matters relating to product compliance issues. Her regulatory practice involves a variety of state and federal product safety, chemical management, and related regulatory issues and encompasses compliance, enforcement, and litigation. In particular, Jen routinely advises large and small companies regarding compliance with California Proposition 65. Jen also regularly advises companies on market entry analysis and strategy including Safety Data Sheets, labeling and warnings, and litigation avoidance.
